Recommendations

- Voter Registration Card: Allow write-in language preferences & add a preference question for format.

- Mailing Voter Information: Apply all statutory deadlines for mailing materials also to materials in other languages and formats.

- Hotline Calls: Develop a system to better track and update language preferences.

- Raising Awareness: Promote the availability of materials in other languages through ethnic media and community groups serving language minority populations.
Obtaining voter information in plain language
History of Plain Language

• 1970 | Nixon orders Federal Registrar to be written in “layman’s terms.”

• 1978 | Carter ordered federal agencies to make government regulations easy to understand.

• 1998 | Clinton ordered federal employees to write regulations in “plain language.”

• 2010 | Obama signs Federal Plain Writing Act to “promote clear government communication that the public can understand and use.”

• 2014 | Presidential Commission on Election Administration recommends jurisdictions “test all election materials for plain language and usability.”
Implementing Plain Language

• 1 – Contract a plain language vendor
Some counties have used Transcend Translations or another vendor who can translate written text into plain English for them.

• 2 – Develop in-house expertise
Marin County enrolled several key staff in plain language trainings to learn the art and science of plain language writing.

• 3 – Use the Flesch-Kincaid Reading Grade Level Test
Santa Cruz County tries to follow plain language principles as best as possible when drafting their own materials, and uses the Flesch-Kincaid tool to check their work.
Aim for 8th grade and keep it below 10th!

Implications for Translated Material
Let’s recap…

• Collect & maintain quality data on voter preferences.

• Apply the same statutory deadlines for disseminating voting material in English, to voting material in all languages.

• Promote the availability of materials through ethnic media and other groups serving limited-English populations.

• Produce quality writing that is in “plain language.”
